Large class	Classroom Collaboration: Create an announcement-only Space, so everyone will know where to go for the latest class information. Virtual Meetings: Record the class so that those who missed it, can watch it. People can also join the class remotely.	Classroom Collaboration: Create an announcement-only Space for your class, and another Space for your class to carry on conversation. Consider breaking open conversation into groups if your class is very large. Virtual Meetings: Students can still join class even if not in person.	Virtual Meetings: Allow students to attend class remotely when needed, and record the class. Consider hosting large “problem solving” meetings, where you can help students on mass before big exams. Classroom Collaboration: Create an announcement Space for your class, and group Spaces for your students so they can work together in smaller groups.
Small class	Virtual Meetings: If students are unable to attend, they can join on Webex, or watch the recording later. Classroom Collaboration: Add tasks, documents, and videos to an announcement-only Space, so everyone has access to key information. Have a second Space where everyone can chat and problem solve as a group.	Classroom Collaboration: Create a Space for your students so they can peer to peer problem solve. Consider breaking students into groups of 4 or 5, for project Spaces. Virtual Meetings: Students can still participate remotely in class, even if not in person.	Office Hours: Schedule a 15 minute slot with each student, to meet before the semester starts. Virtual Meetings: Invite students who are joining remotely to present and talk to the class. Classroom Collaboration: Have a Space for full classroom teamwork and discussion, and breakout groups for smaller team work where you facilitate.

PRO TIP
No matter your teaching style, offer Virtual Office Hours so students can book 1 on 1 time with you.
